

RECORDING OF CLASSES AND ACADEMIC-RELATED ACTIVITIES POLICY

1. The University does not permit students to electronically record classes, performances, conferences and similar academic-related activities without written permission. The content of the recording is the intellectual property of the University, not the instructor.
2. Recording a class or any other university activity without permission may result in the University taking disciplinary action under the Student Code of Conduct.
3. When a decision is taken to allow recording for SEND concessions, Registry Services will also inform instructors that permission to record has been approved. Any recordings allowed under this exception are for private use and may not be rebroadcast.
4. Students without concessions, wishing to record a class, whether in audio or video, must email the instructor to seek written permission. The instructor has the final decision on this, and should not deny this without a clear rationale. The instructor cannot deny the recording of classes when it is an approved SEND concession.
5. Students wishing to record a performance, conference or similar, whether in audio or video, must email the organiser to seek written permission. Any recording must comply with the University Privacy Notice and is subject to the University's obligations with regard to data protection. The organiser has the final decision on this, and should not deny this without a clear rationale.
6. When the recording of classes is an approved SEND concession, it is the responsibility of the individual student to record the material. Any students facing difficulties should contact Student Affairs and Registry Services for assistance. It is courteous to remind the instructor that recording will take place at the start of each session.
7. Should permission be granted by the instructor for classes or otherwise, it is the responsibility of the individual student to record the material. It is courteous to remind the instructor that recording will take place at the start of each session.
8. Any recording may only be for private use and may not be rebroadcast. Broadcasting or transmitting a class or similar, or an excerpt from a class or similar, without permission, by any form of media, will be treated as a serious offense under the Student Code of Conduct and will result in disciplinary action being taken.

9. When recording of a class or activity is permitted, students are expected to continue to engage with their studies in line with the Attendance and Engagement Policy.
10. Whilst the University encourages students to engage in class activity, students have the right to withdraw consent from University recordings. Students should contact Registry Services and their instructors to discuss their concerns in the first instance.
